The ceremony, which was performed by the Rev. John Paul Tyler of Frederick, took place under a bower of palms in one end of the drawing room, while quantities of yellow chrysanthemums and ferns were also used in the decoration of that room and the dining room.

The bride's mother wore a very becoming gown of lavender silk. A wedding breakfast followed, at which were present the relatives and personal friends who were present.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Kreh left for an extended northern trip. The bride is going away dressed in a very stylish suit of London smoke broadcloth with hat to match. They will return here to live.

She wore a necklace of diamonds with pearl pendants, and a cuff ornament of diamonds.

Baroness von Kettler, accompanied by her brother, Mr. Hugh Ledyard, sailed recently for France, where they will meet Sir John and Lady Harrington, who are en route from Abyssinia to the United States to pass the holidays with Lady Harrington's mother, Mrs. James McMillan, in this city. This is the first visit of Lady Harrington to this country since her marriage in October, 1907. It is said that no American girl has had a more romantic honeymoon tour than that of Lady Harrington. The trip included a 7,000-mile voyage to Abyssinia, and a journey was taken to the city of Addis Ababa, the capital city of King Menelik II. of Abyssinia. For 18 miles of their journey there was a railroad, but when that was left behind it was a matter of horse and camel riding to Addis Ababa. The arrival of Lord and Lady Harrington was their reception by King Menelik II., whom Sir John and Lady Harrington visited with Sir John and Lady Harrington.
